It aims to and will, if it become a law, abolish sure thing that a strong lobby of gamblers will work against the bill becoming a law, and will use money unspairingly, but it is hardly probable that any legislator can be found who would not kick a lobbyist down stairs were he offered money to vote against such a benificent measure. The council, as delegated to do by joint resolution, appointed five extra clerks yesterday. The house has taken no action in the matter.

The special order for the hour being council joint resolution No. 5, for the printing of 1,000 copies of the governor's mes-sage, introduced by Collins. He thought the printing was un-necessary as the message had been very tavern, saloon or other necessary as the message had been very well circulated by the newspapers.

Collins said it was the custom of the legislature to print the governor's message and not to do so in the present instance would be discourteous to the present chief executive. He thought the message would be an excellent advertisement for the territory.

As an adver-tising medium, the message was on the wrong side of the fence, as it would show that the territory had no public institutions and would of necessity have to build some; that the building of these would necessitate the levying of heavy taxes, which certainly would not be an inducement for people to come to the territory. come to the territory.

The roll call showed Brown, Hatch, Kennedy, Olds, Thompson, of Deer Lodge, and Mr. President in favor of indefinite postponement, and Bickford, Conrad, Collins. Hoffman. Middleton and Thompson, of Silver Bow, opposed to that procedure.

Thompson. of Silver Bow, then moved that the resolution be laid on the table without prejudice, so that it could be taken up if at any time deemed proper. After a

The proposition was accepted, and last Saturday Shepley and Hawkins accompanied by a number of Helena sports boarded the train for Missoula, where they arrived safely. But few preliminaries were wasted when time was called, both men wasted when time was called, both men going at each other with a ding dong and follow up. Shepley found that instead of having a "pudding" he had before him one of the cleverest two-handed hitters he had ever faced. It was a furious fight from the start, both men displaying wonderful pluck and endurance. The science of Shepley was a match for Cronin's strength, and Cronin frequently clinched to avoid punishment, failing heavily on Shepley, who is no match for him in wrestling. The first and second rounds were a repetition of slugging. The third round Shepley got in his right on Cronin's body directly over the heart, felling him like a beef. He, however, revived before the ten seconds was up and came gamely to the scratch.

Fierce blows were given and taken, neither man shrinking from the punishment inflicted. But the superior science of Shepley stood him in good play. He was the smaller man of the two, but he knew how to han-die his dukes. He watched for an opening which came, and quick as a shot he put in his right on the point of Cronin's right jaw which turned his head exposing his neck, which turned his head exposing his neck, and with a swift half-arm blow Shepley landed on his antagonist's jugular, knocking him into a heap in his corner. Shepley and his friends came home Sunday. Shepley shows marks of his punishment. His face is bruised, swollen and discolored and two bones of his right hand are brokes. He says Cronin is one of the gamest men and hardest hitters he ever met. The Helena delegation, while satis-fied that Shepley is the better man of the two, are very much incensed at Kelly and others who tried to work in a ringer in the person of Cronin, who has fought number-iess battles and knocked out nine men. Kelly, having a spite against Hawkins, put up a job by which he thought he could win the purse, but he reckoned without taking into consideration there was a man named Sherike, who would have something to say into consideration there was a man named Shepley who would have something to say. Had he known what kind of a man Cronin is he would not have fought him without going into training. The Helenaites, however, are much pleased with their treatment by the Senate club, who evidently were not aware of Kelly's tactics, but were anxious for the best manto win.

It said that some of Cronin's friends claim the fight should have been awarded him on a foul, as Shepley kicked him, but this is hardiy probable, as Shepley is a scienced man in the ring. The man who taught like Weir, the Belfast Spider, all his tricks would hardly condescend to kick a man he can whip with his hands.

The firemen fought bravely and did very effective work. In about half an hour atings the fire was put out. For two hours or more the seven streams poured into the stable, entirely flooding the basement, and during the whole time the force of the water remained the same.
